

CHAPTER V

CLOSING

5.1 Conclusion

As the author completes the journey of finishing both the book and the supporting secondary media. This project is able to capture a new approach of presenting our underrepresented culture of Javanese dishes and its cultural values surrounding it. Through these illustration that intertwines with the human life's journey according to the Cakra Manggilingan concept and also the Javanese life journey Metu-Manten-Mati, it helps to capture the essence of these cultural ceremonies.

Throughout the design process which went a lot through various alternatives, ideas, and choices, the author decides to pack the story with warm, welcoming, homey feel of illustration that also features Javanese people in the making. Supported also with the chosen layout and typography choice that were made with thorough consideration, the author ensures that the content gradually flows seamlessly without making the storyline feels forced. This allows the readers to feel connected with the plot and make them appreciate more of our cultural heritage.

As the author follows Robin Landa's theory as a guide to make this book, the author faced several steps. From orientating self from collecting data, analyzing the problem and the audience's need, concepting an approach with a creating a big idea, indulging self into the design process, and finally implementing the book as a real product that can be produced.

In summary, with all the aspect from this project supports one and another, this book serves as artwork that can be lightly enjoyed by the target audience by also mentioning the Javanese cultural heritage for the audience to be more aware and more appreciative towards our culture.

5.2 Suggestions

Making this book illustration design followed also by this report, the author has several suggestions to make for the future researchers:

1. It is important to pick the topic that you really like and you feel comfortable of pursuing. But also make sure the topic is relevant and has factual data to support it.
2. Time is very valuable when doing thesis project, make sure you have your priorities set so you can fully focus on the research.
3. Do things systematically to prevent any redos and plan ahead.
4. Recheck all of your data and format before submitting.
